NEW HAMPSHIRE WING

Taking a Local Response to a Global Crisis

The New Hampshire Wing's incident command team served as a vital link between the state Emergency Operations Center structure and the volunteers executing pandemic-related missions on the ground and in the air, at first just five days a week and then transitioning to a seven-day schedule.

From late March to Sept. 30, the New Hampshire Wing carried out over 500 sorties on the ground and 50 in the air in addition to dozens of individual assignments to state agencies. Members drove over 43,000 miles, delivering more than 22,000 cases of personal protective equipment (PPE) and over 1.2 million masks to municipalities, medical facilities and public service agencies. Aircrews provided more than 8,000 aerial photographs to the governor and the Unified Command, while other members assisted thousands of unemployed Granite Staters by answering phones for the Department of Unemployment Security.

During the pandemic the wing's nine squadrons pivoted to online meetings. These meetings and training events, facilitated by members from local units and Wing Headquarters in Concord, helped keep cadet and adult members engaged and active

The wing's newest CAP aircraft lands Oct. 6 at Concord Municipal Airport after a two-day, 1,300-mile ferry flight from the Cessna factory in Independence, Kansas. Featuring an all-digital flight deck, the Cessna 172 Skyhawk will be used for cadet orientation flights, flight training and aerial photography missions around the state.
